Originally a French acronym for Collège d'enseignement général et professionnel, officially known in English as a general and professional college, it is now considered a word in itself. It refers to public education institutions after high school exclusive to the education system in Canada's Quebec province. It's a French loan word. Although all Quebec colleges are spoken by CEGEPs, only public colleges are officially named. Public and private colleges have the same function in Quebec. Although they may occasionally be compared to junior colleges or community colleges, CEGEPs differ in that a diploma of college studies is required to be admitted to a university in Quebec unless a student enters as a graduate student who typically says a minimum age of 21 with other requirements. Pre-university programs are usually two years duration, which explains why high school and undergraduate degrees are both a shorter year in Quebec relative to other places in Canada.How to pronounce CEGEP?
